

The Firm in the News Over the Years

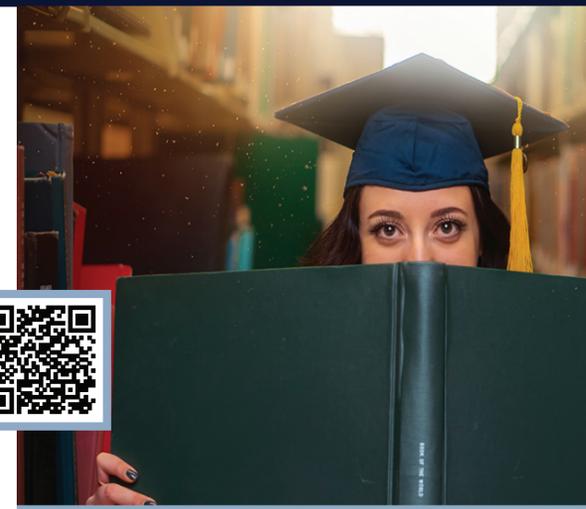

Yosha Cook & Tisch – Personal Injury Lawyers focuses exclusively on cases involving serious injury or damages caused by someone else’s negligence or carelessness. Buddy’s cases have generated national acclaim in well-known national publications such as The Wall Street Journal, The New York Times, The Washington Post, Cosmopolitan, Fortune magazine, and numerous others, including legal journals. Buddy has focused his practice on helping those seeking civil justice for physical and financial injury. Representing people from all walks of life, Buddy takes cases on a contingency fee, in an effort to assist the seriously injured who frequently cannot afford representation to recover compensation otherwise.

2022 Role Model Scholarship

As a family-operated law firm, we understand first-hand just how influential a role model can be in a young man’s life. Just as Brandon Yosha was inspired by his father Buddy Yosha, we want to hear from other young adults about their role models through our firm’s 2022 Role Model Scholarship.

One winner for the 2022 Role Model Scholarship will be selected to receive $1,000 towards their education. The recipient will be announced following the January 31st, 2022 deadline. For information on how to apply, visit our website by using the QR code to the right.

Seeking Justice After a Wrongful Death in a Work Zone

Although death is an inevitable part of life, the untimely passing of a loved one due to someone else's negligence can make a tragic situation even worse. While transportation and construction jobs have a higher risk of workplace accidents, on-the-job deaths can occur in any occupation and under a variety of conditions. If you lost a loved one after a wrongful death in a work zone, our firm is here to help.

Worker's Compensation Insurance Coverage

Workers' compensation is intended to offer financial assistance to those who are injured or killed on the job. This insurance coverage is designed to cover medical bills, lost wages, and other costs related to workplace injuries. Businesses that fail to provide worker's compensation coverage could be held legally and financially liable for injuries that occur on the job.

Although worker's compensation coverage can be immensely helpful in reimbursing those harmed or killed in the workplace, there are certain limitations in place regarding what is covered. In most cases, individuals must meet these four criteria in order to qualify for worker's compensation coverage:

- The party must be an employee of the company
- The injury, illness, or death must be work-related
- The employer must carry worker's compensation insurance
- The party must meet the state's required deadlines for filing

A knowledgeable attorney could help an injured worker or their family assess their eligibility for worker's compensation payments after a severe or fatal injury on the job.

Can Independent Contractors Seek Financial Relief?

It is important to note that independent contractors, freelancers, consultants, and other non-employees are exempt from worker's compensation coverage. These individuals are not considered company employees, meaning that the employer is not required to include them in worker's compensation benefits.

Fortunately, those exempt from worker's compensation coverage are not without options in the case of a workplace injury. Through a personal injury or wrongful death lawsuit, an injured party or their surviving family members could pursue compensation from the employer directly. If a third party, such as a general contractor, subcontractor, or negligent equipment manufacturer, is responsible for the workplace death, the surviving family members could also be able to file a wrongful death action against the third party rather than the employer.

In order to seek compensation through an injury suit, you will need to prove that the employer or another party acted negligently, causing injuries or death. An attorney could assist with this, gathering evidence from the accident and consulting with expert witnesses to establish liability.

Indianapolis Personal Injury Lawyer

Every day, people are injured because someone else failed to use reasonable care. Those people could be landlords, store managers, pet owners, vehicle operators, or supervisors on a job site. These accidents could have been avoided, yet they forever change the lives of the victims of careless negligence. Unfortunately, many of these mishaps result in serious injuries, permanent disabilities or even fatalities. The attorneys at Yosha Cook & Tisch assist clients with a wide variety of Indianapolis personal injury cases. Contact us today for a free case consultation.

Louis Buddy Yosha has won nearly 100 jury verdicts and is considered one of the best personal injury attorneys in the country.

Buddy has won more plaintiff's verdicts than any attorney in Indiana's history.

Recent Recognitions

Brandon A. Yosha has been included in Marquis Who's Who. As in all Marquis Who's Who biographical volumes, individuals profiled are selected on the basis of current reference value. Factors such as position, noteworthy accomplishments, visibility, and prominence in a field are all taken into account during the selection process. Just five weeks into practice as a licensed attorney in Indiana, Brandon's father, Louis 'Buddy' Yosha, entrusted his son to deliver the opening statement on damages for an upcoming jury trial scheduled for October 28, 2020 – the last jury trial held in central Indiana for the remainder of the calendar year due to the Court's COVID-19 backlog. Brandon seized this opportunity by preparing vigorously for what would become a two-week jury trial. In brief, Brandon's new client was permanently disabled after sustaining an electric shock injury while working on an Indiana power plant. Brandon ultraciously delivered the final argument on damages in addition to his nearly two-hour opening statement. The jury returned a verdict of $20.3 million – making this verdict the 12th largest in America in 2020 for all civil cases.
